

XS is the amount of money that you have left over, or that you are under each month.

$i-X=XS$  is the basic formula.

Realizing the basic formula means that you are living in such a way that XS is a positive number. If XS is a positive number, then you have a form of financial balance, or financial freedom, that greatly enhances your overall well being.

The basic formula is applicable to any amount of money, so that it can fit into any kind or size of lifestyle. What is important is that the formula gives you a guideline for balance, which is a form of freedom when applied in this way to your own financial life. Your goal is to have XS, which then you put in savings and investments, which eventually makes you a larger income, and that is a complete wealth cycle.

Keeping aware of your total income, total expenses, and the result of income minus expenses, is at the core of all financial systems. The idea is to become aware of how this formula is actually operating in your life now, and with that awareness, along with the actual formula, you can start to build XS money which you then use to invest. The money you invest, eventually makes you more money, increasing your income. You see how it works?

There is a phenomenon that is very common. It is no matter how much money someone makes, their expenses keep going up, the more they make. You buy more things, the more money you have. To a certain extent, that is great. With this formula, you are able to keep you eye on your XS and realize that XS is the true method to increase your income. And from that increased income, you can allocate more for spending but keep your XS getting higher and higher, so that you income can grow.

The basic formula is simple, yet its applications are very complex. This is a profound tool for materializing the life that you want. Most people go to sleep mentally, in the financial area, because it becomes too complicated. The basic formula keeps it simple for you. Use the basic formula, and begin to apply it to your own financial life today. It is already working in your life. Add your awareness to how it is now, and start to adjust it with the way you life your life, and you can both feel better, and build wealth better.
